Manitoba's election is now the NDP's to lose

If the New Democrats manage to hold on to the lead polls suggest they have right now in Manitoba, there won't be much of a contest on election night.

Two things are going very well for the NDP: strong support for the party itself and a significant voter retreat from the Manitoba Liberals.

Polls released this week by the non-profit Angus Reid Institute and for-profit firm Probe Research suggested 47 to 49 per cent of Manitoba voters intend to cast ballots for the NDP.

Manitoba Sikh youth pull together as Canada-India relations sour

Some Manitoba Sikh youth are feeling frustrated and concerned as tensions between Canada and India run high.

In Parliament on Monday, Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said the Indian government may have been involved in the killing of a Sikh Canadian, Hardeep Singh Nijjar, on Canadian soil last June. Days later, India suspended visa services for Canadian citizens, deepening conflict between the nations.

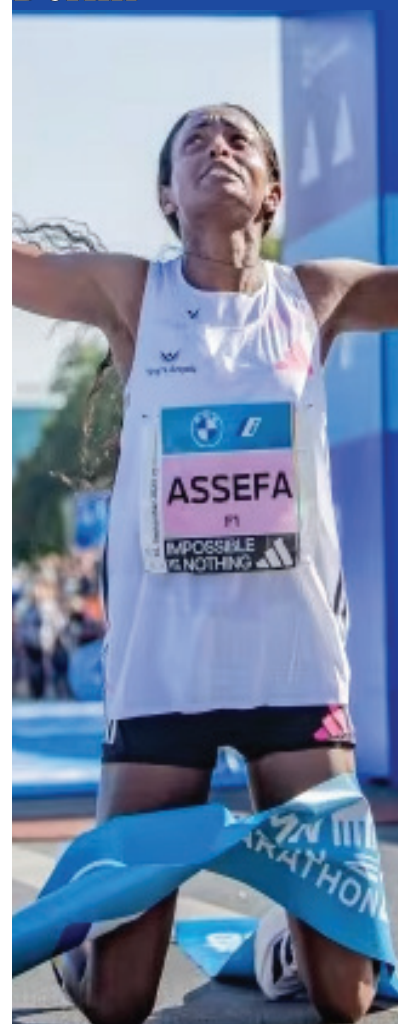

"It came as kind of a shock," said 23-year-old Jatinder Singh, referring to Trudeau's allegation. "It is kind of concerning that it does pose a security threat...if other governments can intervene with Canadian citizens, its kind of unsettling in a sense," he said.
